What is a securities lending arrangement?

ASXSR 2.13 defines a securities lending arrangement as an arrangement under which an entity (as the Lender) agrees that it will:

- a) deliver Financial Products to another entity (the Borrower) or to an entity nominated by the Borrower; and
- b) vest title in those Financial Products in the entity to which they are delivered; and

The Borrower agrees that it will, after the Lender does the things mentioned above:

- a) deliver the Financial Products (or equivalent Financial Products) to the lender or to an entity nominated by the Lender; and
- b) vest title in those Financial Products (or equivalent Financial Products) in the entity to which they are delivered.

Lending arrangements are typically executed under standardised agreements giving the Borrower full title for the term of the loan.

The Lender typically charges a fee for the loan and requires that the Borrower post collateral.

The Lender also typically reserves the right to recall the securities with a specified period of notice prior to the end of the loan period (typically based on the standard settlement period in the market - two days in Australia).

History of securities lending and the role of ASX

The Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) has responsibility for the oversight of financial stability and risk issues arising from clearing and settlement arrangements in the Australian equities market.

Pursuant to Section 827D of the Corporations Act 2001, the RBA determined the Financial Stability Standards (FSS) in 2003 for central counterparties and securities settlement facilities. These standards apply to the facilities operated by ASX and require amongst other things, that ASX have in place arrangements to ensure that settlement is timely, irrevocable and on an appropriate delivery-versus-payment basis.

Following an industry consultation by the RBA in December 2009, the FSS for licensed settlement facilities were varied and the securities lending disclosure regime was introduced into the ASXSR. This was done in part to capture greater transparency around securities lending transactions.

ASX provides the platform used to facilitate the reporting of securities lending by Participants to the market via the ASX Online portal. Additionally ASX publishes the securities lending data on its website* to ensure that all Participants in the market have access to the data on volumes and values of securities lending, rather than just those directly involved in such transactions.

All securities lending data published represents data from the close of business three (3) Business Days prior.

Why is accurate securities lending reporting data important?

The securities lending data published on ASX's website may be utilised for a variety of reasons, some examples include:

On-lending	To determine whether a higher probability exists that the recall of a single loan may trigger one or many additional recalls of securities loans.
Utilisation	To determine whether higher utilisation of securities committed to lending may mean it is more difficult to borrow the security to deliver a recalled loan.
Securities loaned as a proportion of turnover and market capitalisation	The larger the value of securities loaned as a proportion of turnover or market capitalisation, the more difficult it may be to access market liquidity to purchase securities to complete the delivery of a recalled loan.
Analysis of post market events	The analysis of market events after they have occurred to help understand the functioning of markets.
